Steve:

The subject of the Strategic Intelligence School being raised to the National Intelligence level was written up in a paper by me for Colonel Baird's signature about two months ago and sent to Mr. Jackson. Colonel Baird is going to retrieve that study and hand it over to Mr. Dulles with a recommendation that Mr. Dulles bring it to the attention of General Smith.

It is my understanding that a G-2 paper addressed to the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommending that SIS become an appendage of the National War College was turned down by the JCS. What has developed since then is a mystery to me. There is nothing much we can do on this, Steve, until Mr. Dulles has at least read my paper.
